

Subcontractor Statement NSW

As a homeowner or builder in NSW, you may have come across the term "Subcontractor Statement" when working on a construction project. In this article, we will explore the definition of a Subcontractor Statement and its importance in protecting your rights as a contractor or subcontractor. If you need legal advice, Contracts Specialist is here to help.

Purpose of the Subcontractor Statement

A subcontractor statement is a crucial agreement between a principal contractor (often a builder) and a subcontractor. Its purpose is to ensure compliance with three laws:

1. Workers Compensation Act 1987
2. Payroll Tax Act 2007
3. Industrial Relations Act 1996

The subcontractor statement gives you power as a subcontractor to have the right to:

- Work on the principal contractor's construction project;
- Be rightfully compensated for working on said project and;
- Take full responsibility in case of non-compliance to the law;

However, if a subcontractor fails to provide the subcontractor statement to the principal contractor, then the subcontractor's rights and responsibilities would be transferred back to the principal contractor. Furthermore, if the principal contractor receives the form and finds that the information provided is false, then the subcontractor may be subject to an offense that could result in up to 100 penalty units, as per the Industrial Relations Act 1996.

Instances where you will need the Subcontractor Statement

Subcontractor agreement statements are required in various instances. For instance, when a principal contractor hires a subcontractor for a construction project, they must provide a subcontractor statement as proof of the work being done. In addition, if you are a subcontractor and you want to ensure that you will get paid for the work you are doing, you need to have this statement.

If a subcontractor fails to provide the principal contractor with this agreement, the principal contractor will not be able to keep track of the compensation they need to provide as part of their contractual obligations. As a result, the principal contractor may be unable to pay the subcontractor for the work they have completed. In such cases, the subcontractor may be forced to take legal action to receive payment. It is important to note that failure to provide a subcontractor statement may also lead to legal consequences.

How to Fill out the Subcontractor Agreement Form?

The Subcontractor Agreement form is a one-page document that you need to accomplish as a subcontractor for a specific construction project. It is readily available for download on the New South Wales (NSW) government website.

The form includes several statements that you need to agree on to ensure that you comply with the relevant laws and regulations.

Here's a step-by-step guide on how to fill out the form:

Step 1: Download the Subcontractor Agreement form from the NSW government website.

Step 2: Fill in the necessary details such as the name of the project, the name of the principal contractor, and the name of the subcontractor.

Step 3: Read each statement carefully and tick the ones that apply to your situation. For example, if you have employed workers during the time of the contract, tick the box that says "I have employed workers during the currency of the contract."

Step 4: Provide the necessary information for each statement that you have ticked. For instance, if you have paid your employees with their respective payroll taxes for their work, provide the amount of payroll taxes paid.

Step 5: Sign and date the form.
